I half rose and stretched my arm to draw the curtain. What a cry! The night—its silence—was split into two, by a sharp, a piercing sound that ran from the end of Thornfield Hall. My breathing stopped, my heart stood still, and my stretched arm was frozen. It came out of the third story; for it passed overhead. I now heard a struggle. A chamber door opened: Someone ran, or rushed, along the gallery. Another step stamped on the flooring above, and something fell; and there was silence.

My friend will be the beneficiary of my interest and may be influenced by my taste. Each person opens up his or her world of interests to a friend. In this area it can be said that one greatly influences or 'creates' the other. Often a friend is heard to say something like, "Until I met him, I was never interested in that topic. Celebrities suffer from an extreme invasion of privacy. They are constantly exposed to the public, even when they're not working. The public finds out whatever they did or whoever they met. However, celebrities are people with the right to privacy, and we should respect that.

REPLY

↳ Jack: It's natural for people to have great interest in celebrities' private lives. In fact, if people didn't pay any attention to them, they wouldn't be famous at all.

↳ Sarah: If strangers approached me and tried to take my picture wherever I went, I'd feel very uncomfortable. If things like this happen to celebrities, they'll get annoyed. So we should put ourselves in their shoes.

↳ Rachel: Celebrities are paid a lot of money for appearing on screen. I think that money partly repays them for their privacy invasions.

↳ Daniel: We have certain things we'd like to keep to ourselves. The same thing goes for celebrities, and we shouldn't interrupt their personal lives.

In talking with people, don't begin by discussing the things on which you differ. Begin by emphasizing the things on which you agree. Keep emphasizing, if possible, that you are both working for the same end and that your only difference is one of method and not of purpose. Get the other person saying "Yes, yes" at the outset. Keep your opponent, if possible, from saying "No." A "No" response is a most difficult handicap to overcome. When you have said "No," all your pride of personality demands that you remain consistent with yourself. Once having said "No," you feel you must stick to it. Hence it is of the very greatest importance that a person be started in the affirmative direction.

- (A) In 1991, I had spent five months doing nursing work in an African country, Niger. There were many things I found difficult about this place—the climate and beggars were my biggest complaint. Street children would continually hold out their hands, shouting “Cadeau! Cadeau!” in French.
- (B) The beggar woman listened to my words attentively and announced, “Then I will give you a cadeau.” Kindly, she placed an old, dark brown coin in my palm. I looked at it in shock. It was a tiny amount of money—but for this woman, the coin represented a meal. In that moment, I felt shameful wealth and humble charity. With one small token, she turned my perceptions upside down.
- (C) Then, walking through Burkina’s streets, I was approached by an old woman who held out her hand. “Cadeau! Cadeau!” she cried. I’d had enough. I was sick and tired of the country. I told her firmly in French, “I have no money. A thief stole all my money and now I can’t get out of your country. I cannot give you anything.”
- (D) After I’d finished my nursing work there, I headed for neighboring Burkina Faso to work in a health clinic. Arriving by taxi in Burkina, I began to unload. I had a large backpack and a smaller daypack. Out of the darkness, a motorbike with two men approached slowly. Without warning, one of the men grabbed my daypack. Within seconds, the two were out of sight. The bag had my passport, money, an airline ticket and other things precious to me. I was in deep trouble.

While not all excess food is appropriate for human consumption, much of it is. If merely 5% of food waste was recovered, 4 million additional Americans could be fed each day. This is why a growing national movement is under way to recover excess food and distribute it to hungry people. Unserved and/or unsold food can go toward feeding hungry children, seniors, and families instead of being thrown away. More and more companies participate in food recovery programs to put food where it belongs—in the mouths of needy people. Food recovery programs offer benefits to businesses and communities. They can save businesses money otherwise spent on trash collection and disposal fees. They can also help communities cut down on the amount of waste.
